“ Arthur had the right demeanor to succeed his father, and be Woody’s partner, in their family business. We grew up in our early years three houses from each other. Arthur was level headed and always had patience for his three younger brothers and their neighbor playmate. I always thought of him as a big brother although we lost contact after I left for college. Every once in awhile, we would see each other, and every time, I felt like he was my big brother.

Learning of his transition is heartbreaking. Another of the wonderful people who played a significant role in my early childhood Greenwood Avenue village gone. I find it significant that Arthur and my grandfather transitioned at the same age. I pray that Arthur is remembered with the same fondness and reverence my grandfather, Leroy, receives. May his brothers, and the rest of his family find peace and happy memories after their tears wash away their pain of the Shadow of the Valley of Death.
