Janice Drain was my godmother. She adopted me as her daughter and her three sons were my brothers. I lost touch with her and did not find out she died until I went to Atlanta. She was on my mind several months ago and i tried calling her number. I would keep in touch with her from time to time. The last i talked to her was about a year and a half ago. I told her that I loved her.

I dreamt about her one night about a year ago. In my dream she was standing in front of me. It was snowing very hard, but peacefully. The snow was coming down in big white circles and was stark white. The snow was very thick on the ground. She did not say a word, she just stared at me.

I woke up and could not figure out why I had this dream.

I met Janice about 34 years ago. I was looking through the yellow pages for a Beautician. She became my mentor and my friend. She watched out for my daughter and my son. She could always tell when I was sad or had a problem with something in my life. Janice would always listen and help me solve my problems with the power and grace of God on her side. Her passing away came as a shock to me. It threw a damper in my day.

I Love You Dear GodMother and Hope To See You In Jannah (Heaven) one day.
