“Daddy”...not a term used lightly, saved for the male role model/figure that unconditionally raises you, guides you, protects and makes you feel safe. One that you look up to and depend on even more, someone that that has an unlimited supply of "I know how to fix this." "Daddy"...this is what I called my grandfather for as long as I can remember. This is what I heard my mother, uncles, aunt and the rest of the grandchildren (and great-grandchildren) call him. Even my grandmother referred to him when speaking to me as "your Daddy." He was our role model and for some of us, he was also a father figure. He drove trucks, hung Christmas lights, set up train sets, dropped you off at school, picked you up from work...he was like so many other dads out there but he set himself apart in my eyes. We had deep talks, we drank his favorite bourbon, he followed me around from state to state. We drove into a hurricane in Georgia and climbed a mountain in Alaska. He taught me how to make stinky dough-balls to fish and helped me fix a broken bike chain. He helped me pick gifts and showed me how to wear a suit. He took care of me (us) and in the end, I (we) took care of him. I am sad I will never hear his signature greeting or see that wonderful smile and light that shined in his eyes. I am however happy, happy to know he lived the fullest life that one could every live. Daddy was my role model then...and will remain to be my role model forever. Johnnie K. Davis...Husband, Father, Grandfather, Great-grandfather, Uncle, Cousin, Friend, Veteran and my travel buddy...I love you.
